Lessons from the West Coast

RECENTLY I had occasion to visit Portland, Oregon, and as its urban center is approximately the size of Richmond's urban center (though Portland is larger), it was interesting to compare the relatively new with the relatively old city.

First noticed in strolls around Portland is the absence of those old landmarks which characterize most of the older Atlantic coastal cities. Although Richmond's Non-Planners have made tremendous headway in obliterating these symbols of continuity, and in time might succeed in doing away with any vestige of the past, as of now even those remaining give a mellowness to an urban setting, an historic sense, which the newer cities lack.

Also in Portland there is the absence of any central residential area, such as the Fan District, with the result that the urban center lacks the physical cohesiveness and character of any of those older cities where a stable residential area of some vintage provides a focal point. The absence of such a residential center in Portland, just as its preservation in Richmond, seems to lie entirely in the choice of its citizens, or home-owners. That is, neither reflects in any way decisions and acts of the city's official government.

Where Portland has acted officially, and Richmond has not, is in downtown urban renewal for residential purposes. Close to the business-shopping center of town (easy walking distance) a turn-of-the-century area had fallen into decay. In its place there is now a handsome apartment complex, bisected with charming walkways, with trees and shrubbery and benches, and containing an arcade of boutiques facing on an artificially made waterfall over a magnificently constructed formation of rock. Covered, multiple-decked parking lots serve the complex, adjoining it from the outside, so that no cars (or the noise therefrom) enter into the residential area.

For years individual and private groups in Richmond have talked and planned to construct various such complexes, using the site of the river, and actually the only downtown building of new residential units has been the few high-rise apartments constructed and operated by private enterprise. In the City Hall lobby there are models of a downtown complex, very impressive, but, judging from the present drift, more old landmarks are likely to be replaced by parking-lots before any modern complexes replace the blighted areas surrounding parking lots.

In Portland, as in the much larger Los Angeles, one rarely sees an open parking lot in any center downtown area. The tendency seems to be toward covered, multiple-decked parking-spaces off the main streets. To this extent Portland, with neither old landmarks or the physical cohesiveness provided by an enduring residential area, is unmarred by the tacky appearance of the very best of Richmond's downtown center where parking-lots deface the rows of buildings. Portland's attention to its urban center cannot be explained by any lack of suburban sprawl. The semi-urban area extending from the central city is extensive in all directions, and commuting is heavy. It simply appears that the persons in power are perhaps more future-minded and less

State Registration Board

For Contractors

Changes made by the 1970 General Assembly to the Contractors' Registration Law have brought about added protection for the public by broadening the scope of the law and redefining contractors.

The revisions became effective on June 26th, and have been implemented by the State Registration Board for Contractors, long regarded as watchdog for the public and for private individuals in their dealings with contractors throughout the Old Dominion.

A summary of the changes, as put together by Edward L. Kusterer, executive secretary of the board, includes the following points:

- Redefines a contractor and broadens the coverage; changes the amount of a job which requires registration from $20,000 to $30,000; also requires registration of contractors who do an annual volume of $150,000 or more.

- Increases membership of the Board from five to seven.

- Increases the application fee from $30.00 to $50.00 and the annual renewal application fee from $15.00 to $25.00 and requires that all registered contractors file current financial statements each year as part of the renewal application.

- Requires that contractors when applying for permits present evidence of registration or an affidavit that they are exempt from registration.

- Defines exemptions from registration requirement.

- Provides for a fine not to exceed $200 per day for each day a contractor is in violation of the registration statutes, in addition to penalties previously provided.

- Provides for recognition by local authorities of a certificate of registration issued by the State Registration Board for Contractors.

- Provides that a contractor must present evidence of registration to commissioners of the revenue when applying for license or an affidavit that he is exempt.

"Registration insures financial responsibility when the contractor is approved for registration," Kusterer said. This protection of the public has been the thread which has run throughout the board's history since it was authorized by the Virginia General Assembly in 1938.

The process for registration begins when the application—five legal-size pages including the financial statement—arrive in the Contractors' Board offices on the ninth floor of the Ninth Street Office Building (the old Hotel Richmond). Here, applications are screened and investigations started.

New applications each require an average of 15 letters of inquiry, which include verification of the facts included in the application and the applicant's financial statement. Renewal applications are handled on their own merits and on the basis of letters or reports, if any, that have come in during the past year concerning the applicant.

Once the investigation has been completed the applications are passed on, with reports of the findings, to the seven member board for action. Upon approval, a contractor is issued a certificate designating the nature of the work he is authorized to do in Virginia for a year. The certificate must be renewed each year and a new certificate applied for whenever there is a change in ownership or when the contractor wishes to take on an additional type of work. Subcontractors are also required to be registered when they bid on projects handled by registered contractors.

Violations by contractors—there were 82 reported in 1969—will find the contractor the focal point of an investigation. If there is evidence of wrongdoing by a registered contractor, the contractor comes before the board to answer charges. If found guilty, he may lose his registration certificate. A violator may be fined a maximum of $200 for each day he is in violation of the registration statutes by the court having jurisdiction in the case.

The board has the authority to revoke the certificate of any general or subcontractor who is found guilty, after

By

a hearing, of any fraud or deceit in obtaining registration, gross negligence, incompetence or misconduct in the practice of his profession, or willful violation of any provision of the registration law. The contractor may appeal the board's decision to the courts if he so desires. The board is also required to notify the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the clerk of each incorporated city, town or county of its findings in case of revocation, or re-issuance of a revoked certificate.

Kusterer, who has been executive secretary of the board since December 1953, is unable to recall a single instance during his tenure when a certified contractor has been charged with using inferior materials, and only rare instances when inferior workmanship was the cause for complaint.

"Just knowing that the certificate to do business in Virginia can be lost for dishonesty, or for hiring an unregistered subcontractor is deterrent enough for most contractors," he said. "There are some reports of improper actions by contractors, but generally they involved disgruntled homeowners who were dissatisfied with the way their homes were built, or reports by persons who know of an unregistered contractor doing a job above the statutory maximum for non-registered contractors. In the unhappy homeowner cases, I usually advise the complainant to talk with the contractor to try to work out their differences. It is usually just a matter of a breakdown in communications."

When complaints involve projects under the $30,000 figure, the firms are not required by law to be registered. Kusterer recommends that the complainant talk with an attorney. The board has no authority in these cases.

In the instance when a non-registered contractor begins work on a job requiring registration, or if the contractor hires an unregistered subcontractor, the board has the authority to request all work on the job to stop immediately and the contract be terminated. If the contractor fails to comply with the board's request, the case is passed to the local commonwealth's attorney and a local court is asked to issue an injunction or restraining order.

When the board receives a complaint against a registered contractor, a letter outlining the charges is sent to the accused. If the subsequent investigation indicates there is a basis for the charges, the contractor is given the opportunity to take corrective action. The contractor is also warned that state law provides for a hearing before the board and that he may lose his registration. The registered contractor almost always makes necessary adjustments to the satisfaction of all the parties involved. Without the certificate of registration, a contractor will find himself severely limited on the projects on which he may work.

One area in which there may be some confusion on the part of the general public is in the distinction between a builder and a contractor. The law is specific on this and states, in effect, that a contractor is one who hires his services to others to construct from another's plans. He offers, basically, his integrity and competence for sale.

The builder builds on his own account—that is, he may build several homes on a parcel of land he owns, and then offer a complete parcel—home and lot—for sale. Builders are not required to be registered, although many are and homebuilders' associations encourage registration by their members.

Contractors' applications for registration must be received by the Registration Board at least 30 days prior to a board meeting. The meetings are generally held in Richmond in January, April, July and October. This 30-day period is necessary for the thorough investigation Kusterer and his staff make on each new applicant. The complete investigation will gather data on the firms' most important contracts during the past five years; information about contracts now being performed, including their location; amount and percentage completed; references from bankers, architects or engineers and owners for whom contracts have been performed. References will also be sought from supply houses from which the applicant buys most of his materials; personal data which would indicate integrity, training and experience; corporate or partnership information; and financial information that leaves very little doubt as to the applicant's monetary position. Failure to furnish any of this information or to falsify the application in any ways means immediate refusal of registration. All information furnished the office is confidential.

Kusterer's investigative reports are tempered with compassion and common sense. For instance, an ex-convict who made a clean breast of his past conviction, and who has led an exemplary life in the years since, would probably be looked upon favorably. The man who neglected to report a past brush with the law has little chance of a favorable recommendation. Investigation might also turn up a past bankruptcy.

The determination here would be gauged on when the bankruptcy occurred, and how the contractor had performed in re-establishing himself in the business world. The board determines the credit rating of the applicant with his suppliers, and checks mercantile agency reports. The interest here is to determine the liquid assets of the individual, whether or not he has enough liquid working capital to carry labor and materials on a job for a minimum of 90 days, as well as whether he pays his bills on time. The necessary capital is determined by the type of construction for which the applicant is applying, and the type of work he has done in the past.

Further investigation includes inquiry into the past performance and experiences with owners for whom the applicant has worked. Architects and engineers who have supervised work on which he has been involved are queried, as are his competitors—other contractors—and local trade associations in the applicant's home locale. In the case of subcontractors, the applicant's performance with general contractors for whom he has worked is determined. At times, there is voluntary information about an applicant when a fellow contractor, or a private citizen, learns the application is pending. Oral examinations are required when there is doubt about a specific applicant.

In the case of electrical and plumbing contractors, written examinations must be taken and passed before registration is approved.

When the board members receive the application and financial report, and the investigative reports made by the board's office, they have a comprehensive picture of the applicant's past performance, his training in his chosen field, and his financial condition and responsibility.

The board is able to determine, from the submitted material, whether or not the contractor is honest and competent, experienced in the field for which he is applying, and capable of meeting his obligations to those for whom he will be working and to his employees.

Workings of the board are such that the incompetent, unscrupulous and just plain under-financed contractors are denied registration. Of the 600 new applications received by the board since January, 1970, 422 have been approved, 30 were deferred until the contractor could meet some specific requirement, and 140 were denied. Approximately 10 percent of those rejected were not approved on grounds of qualifications—the remainder were denied on financial grounds.

Of the 4300 renewal applications this

And enjoy it. Lakeview Motor Lodge & Country Club is now an outstanding motor lodge, but at one time it was a stable for some of Virginia's finest show horses. There's color TV in every room. Boating, fishing, swimming, and lawn games. A regulation 9-hole golf course, with 9 more holes under construction. Meeting facilities. Informal dining at the Feed Box and the Continental Corner or dining and dancing at the elegant Lakeview Club, where there's live music nightly. Call ahead for reservations and relax with us awhile. STATE REGISTRATION BOARD FOR CONTRACTORS ear, 75 were rejected and some of those will very likely be reinstated. The rejections were caused primarily by financial conditions. An estimated 30 percent of the new applications are rejected each year, according to Kus-rer.

Applicants who are successful in seeking registration are each assigned a registration number and issued a certificate. These certificates are issued for a calendar year and become invalid on December 31st, when all must apply for renewal.

The registrant's firm name is added to the board's roster, along with the address, classification of work authorized and the assigned registration number. The roster is published annually and supplements are issued after each board meeting to include newly registered contractors.

Standard procedure for distribution of the roster and supplements is to mail them to all registered contractors, engineers, architects and state and local government officials and others who may call for bids on construction projects. Copies of the roster also are available on request from the board office.

Architects and engineers, who must also be licensed in Virginia, are required by law to include in their bid invitations reference to the qualification requirements. The law states: "All architects and engineers preparing plans and specifications for work to be contracted in Virginia shall include in their invitations to the bidder and their specifications a reference to this chapter so as to convey to the invited bidder, whether he is a resident or non-resident of this State and whether a certificate or registration has been issued to him or not, the information that it will be necessary for him to show evidence of a certificate of registration before his bid is considered." Subcontractors must also meet the same qualifications for $30,000 or larger projects before their bids can be accepted or considered by general contractors. Similar restrictions are placed on local officials who issue building permits and on awarding authorities.

At the present time, the board lists 700 active registrations—general and subcontractors, who have been found worthy of doing business in Virginia. The licenses are granted in four classifications: building contractor, highway contractor, public utilities contractor and specialty contractor, which takes electrical, masonry, plumbing, heating, etc. There is also an unclassified certificate which may be issued to include all four classifications.

Thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia are listed on the registration roster of the Contractors' Board. All contractors doing business in the state must conform to the requirements for state firms as well. Contractors registered to do business in the state list home offices in the following states: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Nebraska, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Washington, D. C., West Virginia and Wisconsin.

There are specific exceptions for registration of contractors doing jobs of $30,000 or more. They are: (1) work bid upon or undertaken for the armed services of the United States under the Armed Services Procurement Act; (2) any governmental agency performing work with its own forces; (3) work bid upon or undertaken for the United States Government on land under the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government either by statute or deed of cession; (4) work bid upon or undertaken for the State Highway Commission on the construction, reconstruction, repair or improvement of any highway or bridge (the Department has pre-qualifications requirements similar to those of the contractors' board), and (5) any other persons who may be specifically excluded by other laws but only to such an extent as such other laws provide.

There is a provision in the law for a temporary certificate. That portion of the statute reads:

"The Executive Secretary of the Board may issue a temporary certificate to engage as a general contractor or a subcontractor in this State as provided in the certificate to any person who is a resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia or is a domestic corporation of the Commonwealth of Virginia who has not there tofore made application for examination, provided that: (1) Such person file with the Board the application and evidence of ability, character, and financial responsibility and the financial statement as herein above referred to; and (2) Such person give bond in sufficient amount with an approved corporate surety conditioned upon the faithful performance of the work in strict conformity with the plans, specifications and conditions, and the payment of all persons who fulfill contracts with the applicant for performing labor or furnishing materials; and (3) The value of the work to be undertaken does not exceed one hundred thousand dollars."

The law further states that the certificate shall be valid until the next meeting of the board, when the applicant must submit himself to the regular examination required by the board along with all other requirements. If the application or the resulting examination and investigation are found not satisfactory, and the board does not issue a regular certificate to the person, the temporary certificate shall permit the applicant to complete any work upon which he has been awarded a contract or is performing, as long as the required bond is in force.

Any applicant failing to pass such an examination may be re-examined by the board at any regular meeting within one year without payment of additional fee.

The Virginia Contractors' Registration law, and the administering facilities of the contractors' board, came into being through legislation of the 1938 General Assembly. The very existence of the board was necessitated by the national emergency brought on by the Depression of the 1930's. Contracting seemed an inviting livelihood to many men in those days, and lack of experience, lack of capital and financial responsibility sent many of the contractors into bankruptcy.

In other areas of the stricken nation contractors were substituting inferior materials and workmanship in order to stay in business. Credit for the prevention of public disasters in Virginia can be traced directly to the existence of the board, which no doubt maintained the contracting business on the high plane it has enjoyed in the state.

The Contractors' Board is an independent unit which reports only to the governor. Members, increased from five to seven by the 1970 General Assembly, serve terms of five years, with at least one appointment to be made annually as the terms of the members expire. All vacancies on the board are filled by the governor.

By law, "at least one member of the board shall have as a larger part of his business either the construction of highways or the construction of public utilities; at least one shall have as the larger part of his business the construction of commercial and industrial buildings; at least one shall have as a larger part of his business the construction of single family residences; at least one shall have as a larger part of his business the sales of building materials and supplies; and at least one shall be a subcontractor or as generally regarded in the building industry." No member is eligible to serve for more than two successive terms.

Officers are chosen each year at the April meeting. The 1970 chairman is J. B. Burton of Lynchburg who was appointed by Governor J. Lindsay Almond, Jr. and reappointed by Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr. Vice Chairman is James W. Enochs, Jr. of Hopewell, who was appointed by Governor Alvertis S. Harrison, Jr. and reappointed by Governor Godwin. Other members are, Wellford R. Sutherland, Jr. of Richmond, appointed by Governor Harrison and reappointed by Governor Godwin; Kenton D. Hamaker, of Arlington, appointed by Governor Godwin in March, 1967 to fill the unexpired term of the late Donald S. Ball of Falls Church and reappointed by him in 1969 to a new term; Joseph F. Ruza, Richmond, James C. Lester, Roanoke, and Glenn W. Saunders, Jr., Weston, all appointed by Governor Linwood Holton to terms beginning on July 1, 1970.

Original members of the board were J. C. Carpenter, Jr., of Clifton Forge, the late J. Davenport Blackwell of Warrenton, C. Raine Pettyjohn of Lynchburg, the late R. P. Liphart of Richmond and the late E. J. Keegan of Richmond.

Subsequent board members were the late L. J. Boxley of Roanoke ('49-'55), the late Fred A. Haycox of Virginia Beach ('50-'60), F. L. Showalter of Lynchburg ('51-'61), W. Albie Barksdale of Charlottesville ('52-'62), C. Ferle Luck of Richmond ('53-'63), William H. Reid of Suffolk ('60-'70), and the late Donald E. Ball of Falls Church ('55-'67).

The late Charles P. Bigger of Richmond was the board's first secretary, from 1938, until November, 1953, when he resigned because of poor health. Kusterer has held the post since December, 1953. Kusterer is aided in the administrative and investigative aspects of the board's affairs by his secretary, Miss Jessie L. Weisger; Mrs. Nell Taylor, clerk-typist, and other clerk-typists and outside investigators as needed. Kusterer plans to employ an assistant this fall who will help in reviewing applications, administrative duties, and do field work on reported violations. He will also be required to handle public relations work in acquainting public officials with their responsibilities with respect to the law.

The board is a self-supporting arm of the state government, drawing its operating expenses from application and renewal fees. The 1970 General Assembly increased the fee for an application from $30.00 to $50.00, and the fee for a renewal application from $15.00 to $25.00. On June 30, 1970, the board turned over to the general fund $48,724 in excess of operating expenses for the past year. The total surplus as of June 30th of this year was $836,986, the bulk of which has been collected in the past 15 years as the volume of applications and renewals grew.

Although the rate of increase in the number of applications has not been appreciable the last couple of years, primarily because of the slump in building and the tight-money situation, a more significant growth is expected as the economy begins to turn up. The rising cost of construction and the 1970 amendments to the law are expected to bring additional contractors under the registration policy of the board. Although less than half of the 50 states require licensing of contractors, and those who do business in Virginia, with the exceptions noted previously, must be registered. There are no reciprocal agreements with any other state, and therefore no reason to question the qualifications and financial responsibilities of contractors doing business in the Old Dominion. The fraudulent, incompetent and financially unsound operator never even receives consideration on a project in Virginia.

Registration of a contractor in Virginia does not guarantee the job, but it does guarantee that the contractor is experienced and competent enough to handle the project, that he has sufficient financing to see it through to completion. It insures that in previous work the contractor has established a reputation for integrity with other builders in the profession, and with the engineers and architects for whom he has worked.

The Contractors' Board was set up to protect the public. The public would be well advised to accept that protection—to hire a registered contractor to handle its building projects.

Lessons from the West Coast

short-sighted than those in the Richmond area and are aware that a decade of the central city would cause residential dependencies to be subordinated to nothing.

Portland's handling of city traffic is incomparably more realistic, as well as more humane, than in Virginia's cities. As this also has long been true of Los Angeles, this practice might be typical of the whole West Coast. WALK and WAIT signs are placed wherever there are traffic lights, and these are rigidly observed by both pedestrians and drivers. Thus, when a pedestrian is crossing on a red light on his street, cars on an entering street are held up until the pedestrian has crossed. Even when a driver's green light on his street permits him to turn, when pedestrians are crossing on a red light on the street in which the car is turning, the driver must give right-of-way to the pedestrian. As a result, there is no wild scampering of pedestrians as a light changes, no apprehensive glances over their shoulders, no impatient in-turning drivers threatening public mayhem.

When I first returned from the Coast I was downtown on an errand, and I thoughtlessly started across the street when the light turned red. Some slight sound caused me to look around to behold a turning car bearing down on me, driven by a woman with an expression of impassive malevolence. Either I could jump back, which I did, or I would have been maimed—although by Virginia traffic laws, I had the right-of-way. In Virginia, the pedestrian's legal right-of-way is meaningless, since it is against the custom of drivers, and pedestrians have become cowed by the custom into expecting no more than dashing for their lives.

In this custom, the West Coast seems light-years away from Virginia's haphazard, confused, undignified "Walk Beware" policy in the cities. It is true, though Virginia has not really accepted the automobile yet, for it lags way behind even New York in regulating city traffic to provide for the safety, comfort and convenience of pedestrians. Virginia's indifference to pedestrian traffic in crowded cities might also reflect the anti-urbanism which has so long characterized the state's thinking and which seems summed up by, "anything that happens to people in the cities is no more than they deserve."

There was one phenomenon in Portland which is beyond comparison with Richmond or any Virginia city or even any Eastern city. It has become t hippie capital of the world. All day long, in all parts of the city, one sees the bearded, dirty barefooted young people, frequently young men with packs on their backs who reminded me of the hoboes and tramps I used to see in my childhood. They set up communes all over the blighted sections and generally seem to cause no trouble beyond the occasional nausea experienced in passing a particularly odoriferous specimen. However, when I was there, they planned a vast gathering to confront the convention of the American Legion, and the reaction of the representative citizens to this threat was the phenomenon that impressed me.

From hotel bellboys through managerial executives to multi-millionaire industrialists, there was a uniform nothing expressed about the hippies which was curiously deadly in its impersonality. The Portlandites did not seem to regard the hippies as human. Their plans for dealing with them were similar to the plans of a bug exterminator.

From reading articles in magazines, I had assumed that "Middle America" meant largely an economic class, with educational limitations, and somehow had the idea that it was mostly prevalent in the Middle West. I could not have been more misled. Judging from Portland, a prosperous, progressive city, "Middle America" is an attitude that transcends economic conditions, educational limitations, as well as geography. And Portland's "Middle America" showed a uniformity of impersonality that was really quite frightening. With all the, mostly empty, talk about "violence" in the air, here was a potential of violence from representative, well-to-do citizens which bore out various theories propounded to the effect that the far right conservative is actually as violent as the militant radicals. Portland is a pleasant city and obviously the authorities wanted to avoid any confrontation which might cause the supposedly latent violence to erupt. The authorities improvised a huge, FREE rock festival some miles out of town, and those authorities showed a better grasp of the motivations behind youth's "confrontations" than that shown by some university presidents. The free rock festival drew the hippies out of Portland like some distant Pied Piper and the American Legionnaires held their convention as quietly as if they had gathered on the desert.

Portland went on its unassertively progressive way, with its clean streets and controlled traffic and genial air of prosperity, but under the surface there is a hard core of the Middle American character that in Virginia one finds only in segments of the population. That is Nixon country, Republican country, and one leaves its physically pleasing impressions with an uneasy feeling about political alignments in the United States.

As reluctant as I am to agree with some of the more liberal commentators, the current national Republicans do seem to be basing their strength on segments responsive to appeals to prejudice — essentially to divisiveness. Of course, the national Democrats were divisive too, in reverse alignments, and I suppose any political party is more concerned with its place in the sun than with (as Nixon promised) healing divisiveness.

Probably it was mere political naivete on my part to be startled at recognizing the political reality of setting one segment against another. It must be true that "travel is broadening."
